Tsarnaev friends may testify in court at motion hearings

Court appearance. One of Tsarnaev's friends allegedly lied to authorities, while the others are accused of obstruction of justice.

Accused bomber Dzhokhar Tsarnaev's three friends who were charged by federal authorities for allegedly lying and obstructing justice in the investigation of the Boston Marathon bombings may speak this week in court.

A hearing was scheduled for Tuesday when prosecutors and defense attorneys will argue various motions including efforts by the defense to suppress statements, moving the trial venue out of Massachusetts and other matters. Some of the motions may require testimony, which could put some of the defendants on the witness stand.

Azamat Tazhayakov and Dias Kadyrbayev, both 20 and nationals of Kazakhstan, pleaded not guilty to conspiracy to obstruct justice and obstruction of justice last year after they were indicted. Robel Phillipos, of Cambridge, pleaded not guilty to making false statements.

Quoted

"The case before this court stems from one of the most heavily publicized and misreported cases in recent local Boston history."

Nicholas Wooldridge
Attorney for Azamat Tazhayakov

The three met Tsarnaev while attending UMass Dartmouth in 2011.

Messages sent to their lawyers were not returned by press time.

Lawyers for the men argue that there is no way they can get a fair trial in Massachusetts and want the venue changed.

"Given the massive amount of publicity in this case, and the apparently voracious appetite of the public for news about this case, it is likely that most — if not all — of the protective jurors will be familiar with the case, and harbor prejudices which will prevent defendants from obtaining a fair trial," Tazhayakov's lawyer, Nicholas Wooldridge, wrote in a court document.

Prosecutors instead argue that a proper jury can be found within the court's jury pool of Eastern Massachusetts.

"The media coverage in this case has been mostly factual, as opposed to inflammatory or sensational, thus undermining any claim for a presumption of prejudice," prosecutors said.

The friends allegedly went to Tsarnaev's dorm room days after the bombing, removed a laptop, a backpack containing fireworks and other items and then later threw some of the items into the trash.

Their trial is scheduled for the end of June.

Andrea Brooks, 34, was stopped in Portsmouth Friday night. Police soon discovered she was wanted for the kidnapping, but could not find the girl, according to the New Hampshire Union Leader.

An investigation revealed that the 11-year-old was at an address in Dorchester. She was placed in state custody until she can be returned to her father. METRO

Walsh: Boston is 'host community'

Boston Mayor Martin Walsh met with city attorneys on Friday to discuss next steps after the state gambling commission denied "host community" status to the city of Boston, which abuts potential casino sites in Revere and Everett.

"My position has not changed: Boston is a host community to both sites, and the people of Boston — of Charlestown and East Boston — deserve the opportunity to vote and have their voices heard," Walsh said in a statement.

Options include appealing the decision, filing a lawsuit or negotiating a surrounding community agreement, among others.

Last week the Massachusetts Gaming Commission ruled against the city's assertion and decided that Boston is a "surrounding community" to the proposed casinos, meaning less mitigation funding and no vote.

Peace is focus of Mother's Day walk

Anti-violence. The Louis D. Brown Peace Institute held its annual Mother's Day Walk for Peace.

More than a thousand men and women, children and grandparents, all from varying backgrounds, came together in a Dorchester park on Sunday and shouted the same message: Peace is possible.

The group prayed, cheered and stretched before leaving the park to march through the streets of Boston for the 18th annual Mother's Day Walk for Peace.

"We're hoping this walk will open up the eyes of the young ones to stop the violence," said Brenda Shepherd, of Dorchester. Shepherd walked on Sunday for three relatives she lost to murder, including two of her nephews.

The walk, put on by the Dorchester-based Louis D. Brown Peace Institute, attempted to raise $200,000 for the organization's work to help family members of murder victims and to advocate for peace.

"I believe that we are one Boston," said Tina Chery, the founder of the peace institute, which is named for her 15-year-old son who was gunned down on his way to a anti-violence event in 1993.

Mayor Marty Walsh, who launched a gun buyback program earlier this year as part of his effort to stem the rise in homicides this year in Boston, joined the walkers on the 3.6-mile trek.

"We are still getting phone calls that somebody has been gunned down. We're still getting phone calls that there's violence in our city and throughout Massachusetts. We need to stop it," Walsh said.

Youth activists

Venezuela frees most students detained in camp raids

Venezuela said on Sunday it had freed most of the 243 youth activists arrested in raids last week on street camps set up to protest against President Nicolas Maduro's socialist government.

Although the government hoped the demolition of four camps in Caracas would snuff out a three-month protest movement, activists vowed the measure had only strengthened their resolve to demonstrate against Maduro.

The students had been camping for weeks outside U.N. offices on a major highway and in several other public squares.

Authorities freed 155 with cautions and orders to report to courts periodically, and instructed 15 to undergo medical treatment for drug abuse, the statement added. REUTERS

Rebels talk of splitting up Ukraine

Self-rule. A separatist leader said the region would form its own state bodies and military after the referendum.

Pro-Moscow rebels pressed ahead with a referendum on self-rule in east Ukraine on Sunday and fighting flared anew in a conflict that could dismember the country and pitch Russia and the West into a new Cold War.

A separatist leader said the vote wouldn't change the region's status, but simply show the East wanted to decide its own fate, whether in Ukraine, on its own or as part of Russia.

A near festive atmosphere at makeshift polling stations in some areas belied the potentially grave implications of the event. In others, clashes broke out between separatists and troops over ballot papers and control of a television tower.

Zhenya Denyesh, a 20-year-old student, was second to vote at a concrete three-storey university building in the rebel stronghold of Slaviansk. "I wanted to come as early as I could," he said. "We all want to live in our own country."

Asked what he thought would follow the vote, organized by rebels in a matter of weeks, he said: "It will still be war."

In the southeastern port of Mariupol, a scene of fierce fighting last week, there were only eight polling centers for a population of half a million. Queues grew to hundreds of yards long in bright sunshine, with spirits high as one center overflowed and ballot boxes were brought onto the street.

On the eastern outskirts, a little over an hour after polls opened, soldiers from Kiev seized what they said were falsified ballot papers, marked with "Yes" votes, and detained two men. They refused to hand the men over to policemen who came to take them away, saying they did not trust them. Instead they waited for state security officers to interview and arrest them. REUTERS

Wrangle over ballots

Ukraine security forces driven by mistrust

The two men crouched in the shade of a tree. The ballot papers they were accused of forging lay on the front of their Russian-made Moskvich car, stopped and searched by Ukrainian soldiers on the outskirts of the port city of Mariupol, in the country's rebel southeast.

"This is how they did it in Crimea," said warrant officer Timofey Rudyak, who like the other soldiers had been sent 500 miles from the capital, Kiev, to restore order to the country's industrial heartland.

Rudyak, 35, said the several hundred ballots, bound in white paper and almost all ticked "Yes," had been intercepted a little over an hour after voting began in a referendum on self-rule — a vote dismissed by Ukraine's government and its Western backers as a sham, a repeat of the vote that saw the Crimean peninsula annexed by Russia in March.

Reuters did not witness the initial stop-and-search, nor were reporters allowed by the soldiers to speak to the suspects.

Whatever the truth, the scene that followed — police rebuffed, an armed standoff in the middle of a road — spoke less about possible vote fraud than the dangerous collapse in trust and order that threatens Ukraine with civil war.

Four police officers arrived, demanding to take the men away. The soldiers of the 72nd Mechanised Brigade, speaking Ukrainian to each other but Russian to the police, refused. After tense words and several phone calls, the police left. REUTERS

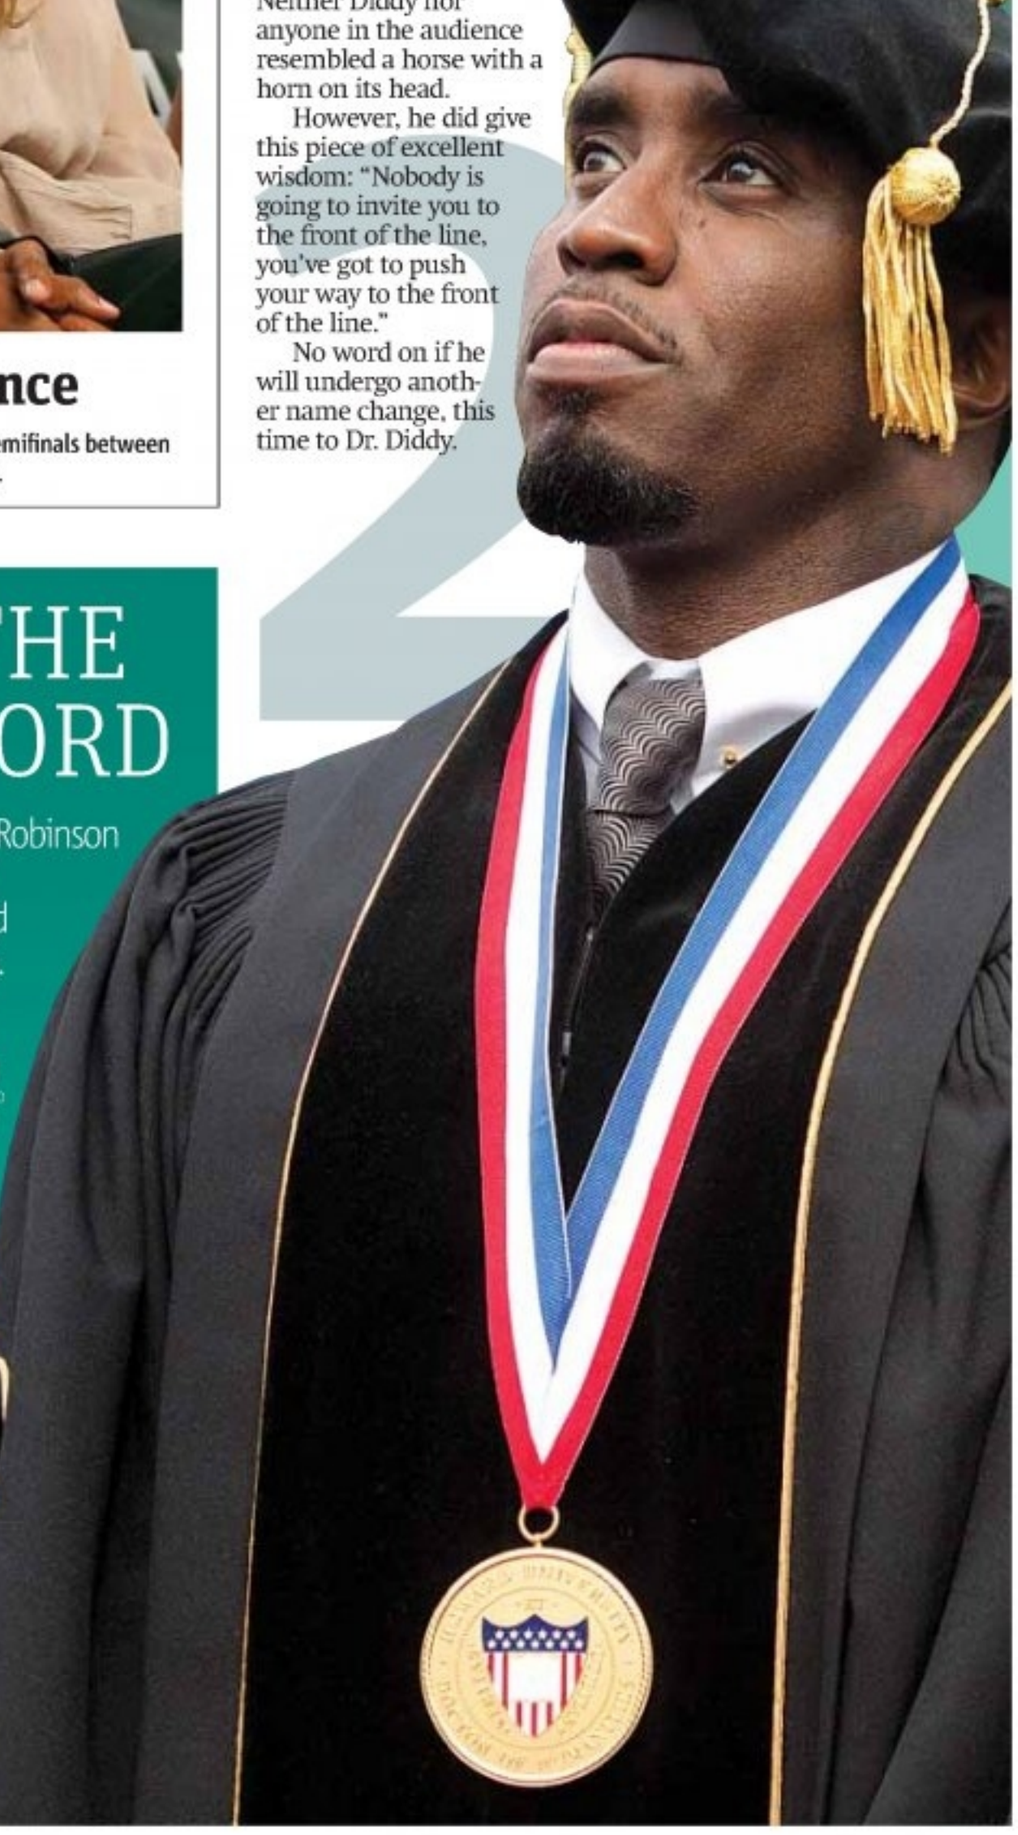
That's Dr. Diddy to you

Sean "Diddy" Combs was awarded an honorary doctorate on Saturday from Howard University in Washington, D.C., where he studied business for two years before dropping out in 1990 to pursue music. And we all know where THAT got him (actually, it got him a lot — like, a lot, a lot).

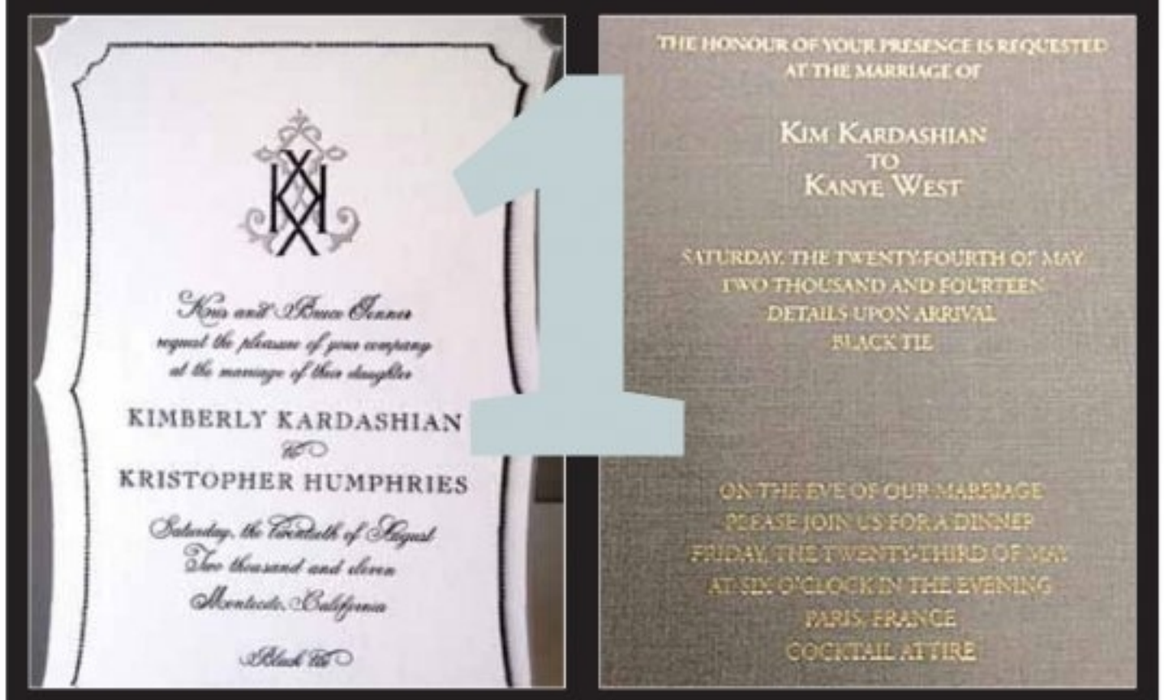
Some of the speech was filled with odd Diddy-isms. "I am a unicorn," he told the class of 2014. "You are a unicorn. We are unicorns." Note: Neither Diddy nor anyone in the audience resembled a horse with a horn on its head.

However, he did give this piece of excellent wisdom: "Nobody is going to invite you to the front of the line, you've got to push your way to the front of the line."

No word on if he will undergo another name change, this time to Dr. Diddy.



A side-by-side comparison of Kardashian wedding invitations



OMG! The Kardashian/West invitations have been sent out! And they've been leaked to the Interwebs so we mere mortals can gaze upon them. We haven't been this excited since 2011 when we saw Kardashian's first wedding invitations (actually, her second, as her very first wedding happened in 2000 at the age of 19; those invites have been mysteriously scrubbed from the Internet). She is a wedding invitation machine!

The Kardashian/West invites look very demure compared to the black-and-white wedding invitations Kardashian and Kompany sent out in 2011 for the reality TV star's very short union to basketball player Kris Humphries. They look like what happens when E! foots the bill for your wedding.

But now we're talking Kanye West money, so the circa 2014 Kardashian wedding invites are much more highbrow. They almost look like a fashion show invite, which is apt as that is exactly what their wedding will end up being.

Chemistry is natural to 'Bones' co-stars

Catch up with David Boreanaz and Emily Deschanel and meet the new "squintern" tonight on "Bones" on Fox at 8 p.m. / JEFF LIPSKY, FOX

Interview. The two stars talk season finales, new interns and directing duties.

After nine seasons, it's safe to say that Emily Deschanel and David Boreanaz have a pretty solid working relationship on "Bones." That might be because, as Boreanaz says, "We have complete trust and respect for each other," calling himself "blessed" to have a co-star "who is so generous and supportive." Deschanel says she loves being directed by Boreanaz, who helmed the season finale.

"He has a whole other career, if he wants it, when this thing's over," Deschanel says. "He's great technically, he's good with the actors, he's decisive, he knows what he wants, he knows what he doesn't want."

The Boreanaz-directed finale airs May 19, and Deschanel promises, "There's a huge thing that happens at the end of this episode … that changes everything, with not only Booth and Brennan, between them, but also between everything, Booth's job, possibly Brennan's job — I mean, everything." Expect changes in the team's dynamics, but Boreanaz assures us that, "Things will change for the good."

Tonight's episode introduces a new intern, played by Laura Spencer ("The Lizzie Bennet Diaries"), who clashes with Bones' style. "[Bones] does not care for the way she guesses about things and makes assumptions," says Deschanel. The new intern is "an intuitive person," which isn't the sort of decision-making Bones approves of, but her hunches often turn out to be right. She may also see sparks fly with team psychologist Sweets (John Francis Daley).

Extra credit assignments

Don't expect either star to head to the writers' room. "I'm pretty good with ideas, but I'd have to really work on that one because I think Emily can attest that my vocabulary's a little limited," Boreanaz laughs. "I get my words out but sometimes they don't make sense."

"I always understand what you mean, though, David," reassures Deschanel. "As for me, I live with a television writer. I know how hard it is. You have to make up a whole story out of thin air, not to mention all the technical stuff. I would be much more inclined to direct before I would try to write."

SETH ROGEN

The actor-writer-director doesn't worry much about aging and doesn't prep for roles.

REELING IN THE YEARS

Seth Rogen isn't old; he's only 32. But he has more responsibilities than many his age, even if the work he stars in — like last summer's "This Is the End" — is generally about youngish men struggling with maturity. In "Neighbors," he plays Mac — a man who's not only married (to Rose Byrne) but also a new dad. Their life is upended when a frat, led by Zac Efron, moves in next door.

Seth Rogen plays a young father combating a frat in "Neighbors." / GETTY IMAGES

The writers talk about how this comes from their anxiety about aging. Is that something you share?
I had no specific fears about turning 30. It was more the general compiling of responsibilities, coupled with the lack of time to do the stuff that I used to do more of — and the physical repercussions of trying to do the stuff that I used to do more of.

The frat boys here aren't completely demonized.
I think in earlier versions of the script the frat was much more [vilified]. But Zac is just such a good dude, and Chris [Mintz-Plasse] and Dave [Franco] and Jerrod [Carmichael] are all such nice, sweet guys that it inherently made them not that bad. It made them more sympathetic, in a great way.

How did you prep to play a dad?
Uh, I did not prep for this role. [Laughs] I do not do preparation for my roles as an actor. [Laughs] I just do it.

You did a straight-up drama in Sarah Polley's "Take This Waltz." Is that something you see yourself doing more of in the future?
I guess depending on who is doing it. I wasn't sitting around thinking, "I want to do a dramatic movie." But when Sarah Polley asked me to be in her movie, that was very exciting. If it was a comedic one, I would have done it; if it was a dramatic one, I would have done it. I just wanted to work with her. I'm not trying to do specifically dramatic work.

Up early

California weirdos

One scene was shot outside of an Abercrombie & Fitch in Los Angeles. "It was open. People were really shopping at Abercrombie & Fitch," Rogen recalls. "But it was 8 in the morning. So only really weird people were shopping. Who goes there at 8 a.m.? It's a weird time to think, 'I need cargo shorts.'"

DISTRIBUTION NOTICE:

■ MASSACHUSETTS RESIDENTS CASH IN: Bags of cash are up for grabs and Massachusetts residents are being urged to call this number: 1-866-227-7192. That's because for the next 3 days, thousands of Vault Bags loaded with real U.S. Gov't issued money are actually being released to Massachusetts residents who live in the counties listed below. Each Vault Bag is being loaded with U.S. currency from the vaults of the private World Reserve Monetary Exchange and the only thing county residents need to do to get the money is call before the 3-day deadline ends to cover just the $99 Vault Bag fee, which is a real steal since each bag is loaded with real money.

Cash in limbo goes to residents in 12 MA counties

Bags loaded with real U.S. Gov't issued money are up for grabs as thousands of U.S. residents stand to miss the deadline to claim the money; now any resident of Massachusetts living in a county listed below can claim the bags of money for themselves and keep all the valuable U.S. currency found inside by covering the $99 Vault Bag fee within the next 3 days

Western Massachusetts Counties
Berkshire	Hampden	Suffolk
Franklin	Hampshire	Worcester

Eastern Massachusetts Counties
Barnstable	Essex	Norfolk
Bristol	Middlesex	Plymouth

▶ How to get the money: If you live in one of the Massachusetts counties listed above immediately call this number: 1-866-227-7192. Residents of Massachusetts will be permitted to claim up to 10 Vault Bags of money beginning at precisely 8:30am this morning.

MASSACHUSETTS - Massachusetts residents who find their county on the Distribution List will feel like they just hit the jackpot.

That's because Vault Bags loaded with real U.S. Gov't issued money are actually being handed over by the World Reserve to Massachusetts residents who beat the 3-day deadline.

The only thing residents need to do is look for their county on the Distribution List printed in today's publication. If their county is on the list, they need to immediately call the Distribution Hotline for Massachusetts residents before the 3-day deadline ends to cover just the $99 Vault Bag fee to get the money.

"This announcement is being so widely advertised because the money is in limbo until it is all claimed. That's why we're allowing any resident of Massachusetts who lives in one of the 12 approved counties to claim the money," said Timothy J. Shissler, Director of Vault Operations of the private World Reserve.

"Each valuable bag of money is sealed with a U.S. Currency Security Seal. This guarantees that the

"In fact, each Vault Bag is loaded with 8 stunning estate wallets custom made to hold secure and protect all 11 of the U.S. Gov't issued notes pictured to the right with the white stars: One valuable uncut sheet of four $2 Gov't issued notes, three valuable never circulated U.S. Gov't issued $2 notes, one rarely seen red seal $2 note and three $1 blue seal silver certificate notes. With all these estate wallets loaded with valuable U.S. currency filling up each Vault Bag, any resident lucky enough to get one could be sitting on a jackpot," said Shissler.

"There's no telling what these Vault Bags could be worth some day. That's because each one is filled up with valuable estate wallets loaded with uncut, old and rarely seen U.S. currency. That's why at just $99 per bag Massachusetts residents are sure to be claiming as many bags of money they can get their hands on," Shissler said.

And here's the best part. Residents who claim the big green Vault Locker pictured below loaded with 10 Vault Bags of U.S. Gov't issued money will immediately have their Vault Bag fee reduced to just $89 per bag, which is a real steal since each Vault Locker is loaded with 110 valuable Gov't issued notes pictured to the right with the white stars.

"With all this money up for grabs we're bracing for all the calls and doing our best to make sure Massachusetts residents get through. But, it is important that residents find their county on the Distribution List and call the Distribution Hotline for Massachusetts residents right away to beat the deadline. Because when the bags of money are gone, they're gone," Shissler said.

"We know the hotlines will be ringing off the hook because we're allowing residents to claim up to 10 Vault Bags of money. But to make sure residents of all 12 counties on the Distribution List have a fair chance to claim the money, we'll be strictly enforcing the 10 bag limit," he said.

Thousands of Massachusetts residents are expected to call to get the bags of money.

So, Massachusetts residents lucky enough to find their county listed in today's publication need to immediately call the Distribution Hotline for Massachusetts residents before the 3-day deadline ends to get the money. So if lines are busy keep trying, all calls will be answered. ■

The Distribution Hotlines open at precisely 8:30am this morning for Massachusetts residents who find their county on the Distribution List. This release is authorized for Vault Bags containing U.S. Gov't issued money by the World Reserve Monetary Exchange. Each Vault Bag is loaded with real U.S. Gov't issued money and can only be claimed by Massachusetts residents who live in one of the counties listed in today's publication and beat the 3-day claim deadline to cover just the $99 Vault Bag fee for each bag of money. Each Vault Bag contains 11 of the U.S. Gov't issued notes pictured below with a white star: One valuable uncut sheet of four $2 Gov't issued notes, three valuable never circulated U.S. Gov't issued $2 notes, one rarely seen red seal $2 note and three $1 blue seal silver certificate notes. The valuable bags of money are being released for the next 3 days. So, if lines are busy keep trying, all calls will be answered.

But only residents who beat the three day deadline and cover the Ballistic Vault Bag fee are getting every single U.S. note shown below

■ REAL GOV'T ISSUED MONEY: Each Vault Bag of money is loaded with uncut, old and rarely seen U.S. Gov't issued currency.

■ UNBROKEN SEAL: The security seal ensures that the bags have never been searched after being filled with U.S. currency at the World Reserve.

Tips for studying

Studying can be tough — especially if you have multiple tests to study for at once.

1 Find your study spot. The first step to successful studying is finding a spot that is study-specific.

2 Review the main concepts. Reading through your notes and refreshing your memory on major concepts will make filling in the details later on much easier.

3 Change up the lingo. Reviewing concepts by using everyday language ensures that you understand it.

4 Speak out loud. A tad embarrassing when the roommates walk in, but the good grades will make up for it.

5 Rewrite your notes. The action of writing what you already know will help pound it into your brain.

Reverse dumpster diving

Win-win. Students empty dorms and go green as they move out — and communities benefit from donated goods.

The end of the school year means not only tossing books aside — it typically equates to tossing them out. As college students empty out their dorms for the summer, heaps of trash — or rather: good, reusable items like mini refrigerators, canned goods, lamps, coffee pots and clothing — get placed into bins.

But not just any old bins; they're recycling containers of another sort. Meet Lisa Boragine, founder of Dump and Run, a nationwide move-out movement launched in 2000 to connect campuses with waste-prevention techniques on local levels.

Boragine explains, "We've become a very disposable society. If you have a broken shoe, you throw it out — but in other countries you find someone to fix it."

When Boragine taught at the University of Richmond, there was a noticeably lax attitude toward disposal as students scurried to move out to avoid fines. "It's like a reverse-timed spending spree," she notes. "Like an old 'Laverne & Shirley' episode, they ran around the supermarket putting items in their cart as fast as they could. Here they have to empty it as quickly as possible."

Boragine created infrastructure for students to "empty their cart" through one of two models. Some schools collect and store items and then have a yard sale. "It closes the loop," she says. Yard sales held in the fall are ideal for students heading back to campus.

The other scenario? Schools donate items to local nonprofits "ultimately responsible" for what they do with them. "The benefit is town-gown relations — the community benefits and the school doesn't have to throw out stuff," she says.

Careese Peters, above, organized Give & Go at Suffolk University to prevent useful items from being discarded. / PROVIDED

Quoted

"As more schools do this, there's more of an awareness. The rising costs of college, the downturn in the economy and people becoming more aware of affluence ... it's a little bit of everything, so people are much more aware and more willing to embark on a strategy."

Lisa Boragine, founder of Dump and Run

At Suffolk University, the Dump & Run program is known as Give & Go. Last year the school contributed more than 6,600 pounds of material to Goodwill and other organizations. Careese Peters, a senior at Suffolk, mentions that three resident halls on campus have bins for nonperishable food, home goods and clothing. As the program coordinator points out, "Waste diversion is huge! I work with community shelters, and this is incredibly helpful to them."

The local nonprofit that Suffolk currently works with gives everything to the community for free. She says that underprivileged locals find items "so valuable."

Schools decide what works best with their local organizations. New York's Fordham University collaborates with Project Find, which collects items and sells them at their thrift store.

Leslie Ann Timoney, associate director of campus operations at Lincoln Center, explains that the kitchens in McMahon Hall usually yield a "hodgepodge of silverware and plastic containers." (Through May 28, students can put items into white Goodwill bins outside McMahon.)

Considering that Project Find provides one hot meal every day for neighborhood senior citizens, donated spare silverware and plastic containers "mean a senior can take food back to their apartments."

Elementary. After a cheating scandal at 19 Philadelphia schools, the investigation yields more charges

A Philadelphia elementary school principal and four teachers were accused of conspiracy and other charges last week, the first criminal counts filed in a test cheating scandal in city schools, authorities said.

The educators perpetuated "a culture of cheating" on the Pennsylvania System of School Assessment tests for five years, state Attorney General Kathleen Kane said in a statement.

They are accused of changing student answers and providing test answers to students, the statement said. Kane said an investigation began in 2011 after authorities noticed suspicious test results — and when the cheating stopped in 2012, students' scores dropped dramatically.

Earlier this year, 15 staff members at 19 schools were disciplined as part of the investigation, which Kane said is continuing.

The problem of cheating on standardized tests will not be resolved while teachers are under pressure for scores to be high, said Jerry Jordan, head of the Philadelphia Federation of Teachers.

"We must address the current test-and-punish culture that dominates public education and puts many teachers in the position of fearing for their careers and professional reputations," Jordan said in a statement.

Principal Evelyn Cortez and two teachers were charged with corruption, perjury, tampering, forgery and criminal conspiracy. The two other teachers were charged with tampering, forgery and conspiracy. REUTERS

How to get a job at a startup

Tech. We got five tips from Uncubed founder Tarek Pertew.

Everybody wants to be the next Mark Zuckerberg, and young job-seekers are skipping big-box corporations in lieu of hip, successful startups.

Uncubed, produced by Wakefield Media, aims to streamline that process and make it fun. The company just launched a job search function on its site and holds fun events to connect job-seekers with the startup world's hottest companies, like Mashable, BuzzFeed and Seamless. Don't call it a career fair, though: These casual events feature puppies, dunk tanks and cold beers.

We talked to Wakefield co-founder Tarek Pertew and asked him for his Top 5 tips on landing your dream job at a startup.

Find a way to stand out by thinking outside the box. / FUSE

Do your homework

Want to make a good first impression? Then do your research so you know how to talk shop. "Make sure you know what they're hiring for and what they're working on so when you approach them, you're fully equipped with that information," says Pertew.

Pertew says there's one question that turns him off pretty quickly as an employer: "'What does Wakefield do?' That's a red flag," he says. "You should do your homework if you're serious about working at a company."

Think outside the box

It's hard to stand out on a day when employers are meeting masses of job seekers, but turning something into a conversation piece can make all the difference. "It can even be a business card — yours might have something a little different that extends the conversation or engages," says Pertew. "It's the same with a résumé. If you have something different, it's a superficial way of separating yourself from the crowd."

Of course, you'll have to match style with substance. Pertew says the most important thing is to do your research on companies and show that you can fit in with their work culture.

Be patient

Your dream employer may not be in a position to offer you a job now, but they may be able to fit you in somewhere down the line. "Patience is absolutely a virtue," says Pertew. "A number of companies might say, 'You're cool, analytical and bright — we might have a position for you in a year.' Keep networking and keep showing up. Develop a skill set they need."

Pertew says it's never a bad idea to spend a couple of years developing a specialized skill (he gave user experience design as an example) in order to have a more appealing résumé. "It's that sacrifice you make early on that will make a positive impact on the remainder of your life," he says.

Just take the meeting

No openings? Try anyway

Never skip out on meeting with someone from your dream company just because they haven't posted openings. If you really impress an employer, they may just create a job for you.

"One thing we hear a lot is, 'I really like this person and we're going to see if we can find an opportunity for him or her,'" says Pertew. "It goes back to culture — they met a guy they really loved so they're going to see where they can fit him."

Pitch ideas

Don't give unsolicited criticism, but offer up some cool ideas to your favorite companies. "One of my favorite things is when someone gives us a laundry list of ideas they think we can use — it gives you something to talk about during an interview, also," says Pertew.

Listing good ideas helps you express enthusiasm for the company and also shows potential employers your creative and critical thinking skills. Just be careful how you word things: "The best way is maybe saying, 'You probably already thought of this, but have you ever thought of doing this?'" Pertew says even if the company has already thought of the idea, you're validating it, and if they haven't, you just may impress them with what you have to say.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. You are always ready to lend a hand, and it will win you many friends and valuable allies. An associate will provide the key needed to help you realize a professional opportunity.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. You will be admired for your creative talents. You may be in a mood to party, but don't give in to excess. Overindulgence will lead to stress.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. Problems with your partner may require professional help. If you are not getting the honest feedback you need, get legal advice. Taking a casual "wait and see" attitude could be costly.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. You can't take things at face value. Someone may be stretching the truth. Rather than depend on others, you will need to do some independent digging to get the real story.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. This is not a good time to lend or borrow. Someone may try to take advantage of you. Steer clear of any loan requests, and keep tabs on your possessions.

RE: 'Cyrus is back, y'all' (Metro, May 8) I cannot understand why Metro would lower its standards and values by publishing a picture of Miley Cyrus grabbing herself. The picture is an affront to me and it should be an embarrassment to all. How can you really justify publishing that kind of trash? I am grateful that I do not have any young kids that would be badly influenced by Cyrus' raunchy, disgusting behavior. This is just a bad example of what we should be teaching our children to avoid. We need to teach our children to have respect for themselves and not expose them to this.

Re: 'Climate consensus' (Metro, May 9-11) Everybody has freedom of speech. But you do not have the freedom to harm me. Please, all skeptics, stop arguing temperature and take a minute to look at the graph of the concentration of CO_2 in the Earth's atmosphere, which you and I breathe. It's been measured on a mountaintop in Hawaii and also in Antarctica. Readers can Google "carbon dioxide in air" or go to www.esrl.noaa.gov/gmd/ccgg/trends or any other website that has images. You will see for yourself that the level trend jiggles over the year but the curve is sharply upward!

Re: 'Cool the debate on global warming' (Metro, May 8) The claim by letter writer Vlado Haluska that global warming could be natural is without merit. Virtually all scientists agree that warming is real, and most believe it is man-made. Natural cycles in the past occurred over geological times of thousands of years. Our warming was not detected 50 years ago, and has been rapid since then. The only event to cause it has been human activity.

B's seek a quick close

NHL. The Bruins have won two straight in their series against the Canadiens and are now looking to eliminate their rivals.

It took five games in the 2014 Eastern Conference semifinals to truly look like themselves again, but the Bruins' wire-to-wire, 4-2 win over Montreal at TD Garden on Saturday put them one victory away from yet another Eastern Conference finals.

Game 5 was the first contest that the B's controlled from start to finish and it helped that they scored not only one, but their first two power-play goals of the series. The final score was somewhat misleading too, as P.K. Subban's power-play goal came in garbage time.

Still, the saying that the toughest win to get in a series is the fourth one should be proven on Monday (7:30 p.m., NBCSN) at the Bell Centre. The Bruins know that they'll have to play their best game against the Canadiens to send their rivals packing for the summer.

"I don't think you can look at [Saturday] and say that all of a sudden we found our game," cautioned Bruins head coach Claude Julien. "I think we were better [than before] but there's another game to win and I'm being honest here — we know it's not going to be easy."

For what it's worth, in a very small sample size, Boston is 1-0 in closeout games this postseason after beating Detroit 4-2 in Game 5 on April 26. Remember that was at the Garden and the Red Wings never came close to pushing the Bruins like the Canadiens have. Going into Sunday night, all four semifinal series around the NHL are headed to at least a sixth game and it's always preferable to eliminate an opponent as early as you can.

Besides the power-play goals by Reilly Smith and Jarome Iginla — which were scored 32 seconds apart in the second period — Game 4's other underlying theme for the B's was the continued excellence of their third line: Carl Soderberg, Loui Eriksson and Matt Fraser. They were all a game-high plus-2 while Soderberg earned the first star of the game and the Bruins old school jacket with a goal (the first of his NHL postseason career) and two assists. Eriksson had a goal and assist and Fraser added an assist.

The further that you advance in the NHL playoffs is usually the result of superior depth; that is one of the main reasons — besides Tim Thomas' brilliance — that the Bruins won the Stanley Cup in 2011.

"It's happened to us in the past. Any time that we've had more than just two lines that can be scoring threats it's really helped," noted Julien. "We know that [Gregory] Campbell's line still gives us some great scoring chances."

Eliminators

The Bruins are 8-6 in playoff games, in which they have a chance to eliminate their opponents, since the start of the 2010-11 Stanley Cup playoffs. They are already 1-0 this postseason, having eliminated the Red Wings with the first chance they got.

Water-gate

Bruins forward Shawn Thornton was fined $2,820.52 by the NHL for squirting Canadiens defenseman P.K. Subban in the face with water out of a water bottle.

- "Someone had squirted water twice at the end of the game in my visor and I couldn't even see for a minute and a half," explained Subban.

Belichick dishes on Garoppolo

The Patriots made headlines with their second-round pick in this past weekend's NFL Draft as, despite having Tom Brady and capable backup Ryan Mallett on the roster, they picked a quarterback. Eastern Illinois' Jimmy Garoppolo became the highest drafted quarterback by the Pats since they tabbed Drew Bledose No. 1 overall in 1993. Said Patriots head coach Bill Belichick about the pick: "We know what Ryan's contract situation is. We know what Tom's age and contract situation is."
